The 2015 application for the Carnegie Community Engagement classification provides campuses with the opportunity to develop institutional capacity for growth and assessment of community engagement. Individuals and teams will be oriented to the Carnegie framework, have access to samples of exemplary applications, receive coaching from faculty and have time to develop plans for accessing and developing evidence to support an application. Participants return to campus with a plan for developing institutional capacity for generating and gathering evidence for community engagement, ideas for advancing the community engagement mission of their campus, and ways to connect work associated with the Carnegie application to other aspects of institutional work.
